Symtrax Releases StarQuery Web, the New Solution to Access Strategic Information over the Web

Los Angeles; Boston; London; Nîmes; Mumbai – November 28th, 2011 – Symtrax, a world leader in multiplatform reporting solutions, today announced the release of StarQuery Web, the newest addition to its StarQuery 4 Business Intelligence and ad-hoc query software suite. StarQuery Web allows end-users to create and share real-time data in professional business reports any time, from anywhere through a web interface without the need for additional spreadsheet software.

The intuitive web interface exposes users to only the fields and tables they need, enabling them to drag and drop fields directly into a report without requiring an understanding of SQL or database schemas. Reports can include drill down and drill sideways capabilities; catering to both ad-hoc and analytical reporting requirements.

Businesses already using StarQuery Suite can use existing business views (mapfiles) and offer their users the flexibility of reporting through the web in addition to working directly in Excel. New users can use the StarQuery Suite MapDesigner module to create user friendly views of their databases that end-users build upon to create their own queries. StarQuery Web, like other StarQuery modules, allows simultaneous data retrieval from any combination of multiple databases and utilizes an “in-memory” feature that accelerates data retrieval rates and allows StarQuery to report against virtually any database, even those that are not fully SQL compliant.

Intuitive, easy to use and Setup, StarQuery Web is valuable solution for sharing strategic information and raising productivity. It does not require a data warehouse or modifications to existing infrastructure and its web interface offers centralized installation and security control.
